College Profile

Established in 1972, by the Delhi government the college has been named after Satyawati Devi an ardent freedom fighter from Delhi. Behan Satyawati combined her zest for national liberation with the cause of freedom for women. She was instrumental in drawing a large number of women from their homes into the Civil Disobedience movement in Delhi. Her inspiring speeches and defiant act of making salt in the marshy land of Shahdra led to her imprisonment. While in jail, she continued to inspire women to struggle for freedom from British rule. Mahatma Gandhi in appreciation of her zeal called her 'Toofani Behan'. The college strives to live by the spirit of this immortal heroine of our freedom struggle.

Satyawati College has a sprawling green campus spread over ten acres with a student body of roughly 2500 boys and girls. The college attracts students from diverse socio-economic, cultural and regional backgrounds, and provides them a healthy atmosphere to mingle with each other.
